ERECTILE DYSFUNCTION – CAN HAPPEN TO EVERY

man and woman

Problems with maintaining an erection happen at least once in five sexual relations. It can be said that there is no man who at least once in his life has not experienced this and failed at this most important moment.

The first reaction is usually surprise, then comes rage, often unjustly discharged on the partner. This ends with a growing sense of shame, falling self-esteem, and when the causes of this discomfort are not removed and it is not a one-time event, it can even lead to severe depression.

The most important thing, of course, is to diagnose what causes the inability to get a proper erection and maintain it for the desired time. This should rather be dealt with by specialists, and the most common causes pointed out by them are:

- stress resulting from fears about whether we will be able to satisfy our partner;
- inhibitions brought up for example from home, where sex was treated as a taboo subject;
- physical and mental exhaustion;
- prostate hypertrophy;
- cardiovascular diseases and the medication taken for them;
- testosterone deficiency;
- andropause;
- excess alcohol and smoking too many cigarettes.
