The Fluxactive Complete formula has multiple benefits for the male body. It can even allow men to experience enhanced energy levels so that they remain physically active all day long.

What Are The Core Ingredients Used In Fluxactive Complete?

As we all know, the prostate is a very crucial part of men's reproductive function. To protect the same and prevent issues related to the prostate gland, Fluxactive Complete uses the following ingredients:

Catuaba

The Catuaba plant contains components that have been shown in animal studies to increase testosterone levels by as much as 50%. Catuaba also appears to be effective against ED and may even help with premature ejaculation. It is thought that Catuaba works by increasing blood flow to the unit during arousal, thus helping men achieve stronger outcomes.

It is believed to work by stimulating nitric oxide production in the body. Nitric oxide helps relax smooth muscle cells in the walls of blood vessels, allowing more blood to flow through them. In addition, Catuaba increases the amount of oxygen carried to the tissues of the unit, resulting in firmer actions.

There are no known side effects associated with Catuaba use. However, you should always check with your doctor before starting any new supplements or medications, including Fluxactive Complete.

Damiana

Damiana is another herb commonly used to treat male impotence. Damiana has been found to improve both mental and physical aspects of intercourse and can help men who suffer from low drive. It is believed that damiana helps to regulate hormones and therefore increases testosterone production.

Damiana is often referred to as “the aphrodisiac” because it is said to stimulate the body’s natural desire to make love. In addition to its ability to boost testosterone, damiana is also reported to increase energy levels, improve mood, and enhance overall well-being.

A study published in the Journal of Ethnopharmacology suggests that damiana may actually work better than Viagra® when treating ED. Researchers tested the effects of damiana on rats and found that it increased their testosterone levels by up to 40% more than Viagra® while having little or no negative impact on heart rate or blood pressure.

In fact, the researchers concluded that damiana might be safer than Viagra® since it doesn't produce the same level of side effects.

It is important to note that damiana is not recommended for women due to its estrogenic properties.

Chinese Ginseng

Ginseng is one of the most popular herbs used to promote a healthy performance. There are many different types of ginseng available, but the two most common forms are American ginseng and Asian ginseng. Both types contain compounds called saponins, which are responsible for the medicinal benefits of ginseng.

Saponins are considered to be the primary active ingredient in ginseng, although they do not appear to be directly responsible for its aphrodisiac qualities. Instead, it is thought that these compounds interact with the brain to create feelings of happiness and relaxation.

Saw Palmetto

Saw palmetto is a type of palm tree native to North America. Its berries have traditionally been used to relieve symptoms of prostate enlargement. Saw palmetto is now widely accepted as a safe treatment option for BPH (benign prostatic hyperplasia), a condition where the prostate gland becomes enlarged.

The main active ingredients in saw palmetto are fatty acids, specifically phytosterols. These substances have been shown to reduce inflammation and inhibit the growth of cancer cells. They also appear to have antiandrogenic properties, meaning that they block the action of testosterone. This means that saw palmetto may be able to prevent the development of prostate cancer.

Muira Puama

Muira puama bark has long been used in South America as a remedy for urinary tract infections. It contains high amounts of tannin, which helps to strengthen the walls of your bladder and urethra. Tannins can help to remove toxins from the body, so muira pauma bark may also help to treat conditions such as cystitis and UTIs.

There is some evidence suggesting that muira pauma bark might also be effective in preventing prostate cancer.

Muira pauma works by stimulating the production of nitric oxide in the body. Nitric oxide is a chemical compound that plays an important role in blood flow throughout the body.

This increased blood flow leads to better intercourse quality and stronger finishing.

Tribulus

Prostate health is very closely linked to male fertility. In fact, there's even a name for the condition: "prostatism." Prostate problems can cause infertility, low sperm count, poor semen quality, and painful intercourse.

Tribulus Terrestris is a plant commonly found in India and Asia. It contains several chemicals that have been shown to improve prostate health. One of these chemicals is protodioscin, which appears to increase levels of luteinizing hormone and follicle-stimulating hormone. This improves the chances of conception and increases sperm count.

Another compound found in Tribulus Terrestris is zerumbone, which has been shown to reduce the size of prostate tumors.

Oat Straw

Oats contain many nutrients that promote healthy prostate tissue. Oatmeal is rich in beta-glucan fiber, which promotes regularity and reduces the risk of prostate cancer. Beta-glucan fiber also lowers cholesterol and triglycerides.

Beta-glucans are polysaccharides made up of glucose molecules. They are similar to cellulose but much smaller. Cellulose is one of the building blocks of plants. It makes up the cell walls of all living things.

These components are known to stimulate immune system activity.

Oat straw also contains vitamin E, which protects against free radical damage.
