

Herpesyl Reviews (Legit or Scam?) Is It Worth Buying? UPDATE

Herpesyl is a daily supplement that helps consumers eliminate the herpes virus from their bodies by targeting the brain to heal. The formula triggers better communication between neurons to ensure that the virus cannot survive within the body.

What is Herpesyl?

Very few diseases and medical conditions have the same stigma that herpes has today. It is seen as an unclean disease, brought on by unclean habits. However, as more information is understood about the condition, researchers are slowly learning what they can do to manage outbreaks safely and effectively. Two doctors – Dr. Adrian Kavanagh and Dr. Peterson – combined forces to develop a solution – Herpesyl.

Herpesyl focuses entirely on curing the virus that causes herpes outbreaks, despite research from the medical community that claims it not to be possible.

How Does Herpesyl Help?

The creation of Herpesyl comes after four years of research by the creator and Dr. Peterson. However they ultimately found that 26 different ingredients in the right balance were the key. Many of these ingredients are concealed by a proprietary blend, making it difficult to determine the right balance. With these massive promises, it is understandable that the creators want to keep their incredible recipe under control, but there are a few details shown.

Herpesyl's full list isn't available, but the website shows just a few ingredients involved, including:

Vitamin C Vitamin E Selenium Graviola leaf Shitake mushroom Burdock root Red raspberry Turmeric Grapeseed Quercetin seeds Pomegranate As the user takes this formula, their body first starts to absorb the nutrients as it is meant to. Then, it can use those nutrients to start nourishing the brain to heal. The creators theorize that the brain is responsible for eradicating herpes from the body, which is why these ingredients have to keep the neurons strong. They also start to clean up the communication between the brain and the rest of the body.

The cleansing of herpes from the body happens at a rapid pace, which is due to the many ingredients involved in the process. Read on below to learn a little more about each one.

Vitamin C Vitamin C is used in almost every single bodily tissue, helping to develop and repair it as needed. It is also a catalyst for the production of collagen, although it also helps the immune system to function properly and promotes better healing of wounds. It makes the absorption of iron significantly easier.

Vitamin E Vitamin E is necessary to the functioning of different organs, providing the body with antioxidants that can help with the user's vision and brain health. It can also support the body as it heals from wounds, and it can reduce itching.

Selenium Selenium is another antioxidant, and it supports the health of the immune system. The immune system needs to be strong enough to fight back against the herpes virus, which is why this ingredient reduces inflammation as well. By having enough selenium in the body, users typically are able to remain healthier.

Graviola leaf Graviola leaves are incredibly important to this remedy, helping users to treat infections that are brought on by parasites and bacteria. There is some evidence that it can specifically fight the herpes virus, even though there is some concern in the medical community regarding the safety of this nutrient.

Shitake mushroom Shiitake mushrooms have an antiviral effect on the body. Considering herpes is a viral infection, it makes sense that the creators have included such an ingredient. The purpose of this mushroom is to help users prevent cell damage that could easily mean the difference between an outbreak and a cure.

Burdock root Burdock root is another source of antioxidants in this formula, reducing inflammation and acting as a diuretic for the body. Sometimes, users will add burdock root to their diet as an aphrodisiac, though it is primarily used to promote purification in the blood.

Red raspberry Raspberries are high in fiber, though they do not provide the user with many calories. With the antioxidants that they provide, researchers believe that they have an anti-aging effect, and can reduce the risk of arthritis or diabetes.

Turmeric Turmeric is well known for the way that it reduces inflammation in the joints and digestive system. Often, it is included in its own supplement for the powerful effect that it has, and it is one of the most popular ingredients in the supplement industry.

Grapeseed The extract that comes from grape seeds provides users with another source of antioxidants, using it to promote better circulation and reduce high cholesterol levels. It can reduce swelling in some cases, though it can also be used as a treatment for eye disease.

Quercetin seeds Quercetin seeds are also antioxidants, helping users to reduce inflammation and potentially kill off cells that are related to cancer. It can control high blood sugar, though there is plenty of evidence to show that it can also prevent heart disease.

Pomegranate The final ingredient in this formula is pomegranates, and it provides the user with vitamin C and antioxidants that can easily reduce inflammation that is associated commonly with an outbreak. Some studies suggest that it can prevent cancer and can protect the brain from eventually developing Alzheimer's disease. It supports healthy digestion, and it can protect the user from developing arthritis or heart disease.
