What Are The Various Health Benefits You Experience With Neotonics?

Neotonics Boosts Skin Rejuvenation

The main benefit of Neotonics is that it promotes skin rejuvenation naturally and effectively. Inside every Neotonics gummy, there is a potent blend of nine super-nutrients that have been clinically approved to give your skin a clear appearance by replacing all the dead cells with brand-new ones.

Rich in antioxidants and beneficial bacteria, the supplement targets your gut and purifies it of all toxins to provide you with radiant skin. As mentioned above, your skin health is directly connected with your gut; hence, Neotonics fuels your gut with a positive microbiome and helps in giving your skin a tighter appearance.

Neotonics Helps To Promote The Growth Of Good Gut Microbiome

As discussed earlier, Neotonics improves your gut health to ensure optimal skin cell turnover. Rich in strong prebiotics, the formula helps stimulate the growth of a good microbiome in your gut which ultimately leads to positive gut health and toxin-free digestion. The supplement also supports collagen production, which supports better digestion of everything you consume.

Through this, you are able to achieve better gut health which ultimately helps in promoting optimal skin cell turnover and providing you with various skin-protecting qualities.

Neotonics Helps To Provide Long-Term Anti-Aging Effects

The aging signs on your skin are one of the main concerns for everyone out there. Fine wrinkles, dead spots, and other symptoms make you look ten times older than your original age. To help you overcome the same, Neotonics promote an antioxidant effect, which helps in unclogging your pores and supplementing your skin with strong vitamins.

With this, your skin is able to breathe properly once again and eliminate all the aging symptoms. The replacement of the dead cell with the new ones is boosted, and the plumpness of your skin returns.

Neotonics Acts As A Natural And Strong Skin Moisturizer

The hydrating nature of Neotonics is what makes it stand out of the crowd. The formula is rich in vitamins that act as strong moisturizers for your skin and keep it hydrated all day long. We all know that skin hydration plays a major role in promoting skin rejuvenation, as dry skin is packed with dead cells that promote aging symptoms.

Reviewing The Ingredients In Neotonics That Make It Work

Now that we have an understanding of the supplement let us get to know the ingredients that make the supplement work in the first place:

Lemon Balm

A key benefit of lemon balm is its ability to promote healthy skin cell turnover. Skin cell turnover is the process by which old, dead skin cells are shed and replaced with new, healthy ones.

A study published in the Journal of Ethnopharmacology in 2014 investigated the effects of lemon balm on skin health. The study involved 20 healthy female volunteers who applied a cream containing lemon balm extract to their faces twice daily for four weeks. The researchers measured various skin parameters before and after the treatment, including skin hydration, elasticity, and roughness.

The results of the study showed that the lemon balm cream significantly improved skin hydration and elasticity while reducing skin roughness.

Fenugreek

Fenugreek works to promote skin health by enhancing the production of collagen, a protein that provides the skin with its elasticity and firmness. Collagen production naturally declines with age, leading to wrinkles and sagging skin.

It stimulates the production of collagen, helping to keep the skin looking youthful and healthy. Additionally, fenugreek has been found to improve skin hydration, which is essential for maintaining healthy skin.

Organic Ceylon Ginger

Organic Ceylon Ginger contains a compound called gingerol, which has powerful antioxidant and anti-inflammatory properties. These properties help to protect the skin from damage caused by free radicals and inflammation.

A study conducted by researchers at the University of Miami found that ginger extract can protect the skin from UV-induced damage, which is a major contributor to premature aging. The study involved exposing human skin cells to UV radiation and then treating them with ginger extract.

The researchers found that the ginger extract significantly reduced the damage caused by UV radiation, including inflammation and DNA damage.

Babchi

Babchi, also known as Psoralea corylifolia, is a plant that has been used in traditional medicine for centuries. It contains several active components, including psoralen, bakuchiol, and isopsoralen. These components work together to promote skin health in several ways.

One way in which Babchi promotes skin health is through its ability to regulate melanin production. Melanin is the pigment that gives color to our skin, hair, and eyes. Too much or too little melanin production can lead to skin issues such as hyperpigmentation or hypopigmentation.

Babchi's active components have been found to regulate melanin production, helping to maintain an even skin tone.

Dandelion

One of the core mechanisms behind dandelion's ability to promote healthy skin cell turnover is its antioxidant properties.

A study conducted by Kim et al. (2014) found that dandelion extract was able to significantly reduce oxidative stress in skin cells, which in turn improved skin cell viability and function.

In addition to its antioxidant properties, the dandelion extract also contains compounds that can help to stimulate collagen production.

A study found that dandelion extract was able to significantly increase collagen production in skin cells, which helped to improve skin elasticity and reduce the appearance of wrinkles.

Fennel

One of the core mechanisms of fennel is its antioxidant properties. Fennel contains high levels of flavonoids and phenolic compounds, which are potent antioxidants that protect the skin from oxidative stress.

Fennel also has antimicrobial properties, meaning it can help to kill or inhibit the growth of harmful microorganisms such as bacteria and fungi. This is particularly important for skin health, as these microorganisms can contribute to skin infections and other issues.

It also has been shown to have broad-spectrum antimicrobial activity.

Slippery Elm Bark

Slippery Elm Bark works in several ways to promote skin health. First, its mucilage content helps to soothe and moisturize the skin. It forms a protective barrier over the skin, which helps to prevent moisture loss and keep the skin hydrated.

Second, the tannins in Slippery Elm Bark help to tighten and tone the skin, which can reduce the appearance of fine lines and wrinkles.

Third, the polysaccharides in it have anti-inflammatory properties, which can help to reduce inflammation and redness in the skin. This makes Slippery Elm Bark an effective treatment for conditions like eczema, psoriasis, and acne.
