Red Asian Ginseng

Asian red ginseng, also known as Panax ginseng, is a plant that grows in Asia, particularly in Korea, China, and Japan.

Ginsenosides are the active ingredients in ginseng that are responsible for its health benefits. Asian red ginseng contains higher levels of ginsenosides than other ginseng types.

Studies have suggested that Asian red ginseng may be particularly effective in supporting hearing function and relieving hearing issues. One study found that taking Asian red ginseng supplements for eight weeks improved hearing in people with age-related hearing loss.

Niacin

Niacin helps to support hearing health in several ways. Firstly, it plays a crucial role in maintaining healthy blood flow to the ears.

Secondly, niacin helps to support the production of ATP, which is the primary energy source for the cells in the inner ear. This is important because the cells in the inner ear are responsible for converting sound waves into electrical signals that are sent to the brain.

Niacin also plays a role in promoting ear balance. This is because it helps to support the function of the vestibular system, which is responsible for maintaining balance and spatial orientation. The vestibular system is located in the inner ear and consists of tiny hair cells that detect movement and send signals to the brain.

Muira Puama

Muira puama can help improve age-related hearing loss by increasing blood flow to the ears and promoting the growth of new hair cells in the inner ear. This can help enhance hearing sensitivity and make hearing and understanding speech easier.

Muira puama can help improve symptoms of Meniere's disease by improving blood flow to the ears and reducing inflammation. It can also help promote the growth of new hair cells in the inner ear, improving hearing sensitivity and reducing tinnitus severity.

Cayenne pepper

One way that Cayenne pepper works to support hearing health is by improving blood circulation. The active ingredient in Cayenne, capsaicin, has been found to increase blood flow to the ears, improving hearing and reducing tinnitus (ringing in the ears).

A study published in the International Journal of Audiology found that participants who took a daily supplement containing Cayenne fruit experienced a significant reduction in tinnitus symptoms compared to those who took a placebo.

Catuaba

Catuaba has diuretic properties, which can help reduce fluid buildup in the body, potentially alleviating symptoms of Meniere's disease.

In addition to its protective and healing properties, Catuaba is believed to improve blood flow to the inner ear, which can help nourish the hair cells and other structures involved in hearing.

CrPic

CrPic is a combination of chromium and picolinic acid. Chromium is a mineral that is vital in regulating blood sugar levels, and picolinic acid is a natural chelator that helps the body absorb minerals. Combined, they create a powerful supplement that supports hearing health in several ways.

Firstly, CrPic helps to promote ear balance by regulating the fluids in the inner ear. The inner ear contains fluid that helps to maintain balance, and any changes in this fluid can result in dizziness or vertigo. It helps regulate the fluid levels in the inner ear, reducing these symptoms.

In a study published in the Journal of Otolaryngology-Head & Neck Surgery, researchers found that participants who took CrPic experienced a significant improvement in their balance compared to those who received a placebo.
