How Does TestoChews Work?

Unfortunately for men, their testosterone levels peak around their mid to late twenties. Even worse, thanks to modern diet and exercise habits, testosterone levels of the average man have continued to decline over the last few decades.

When this decline occurs, numerous unwanted changes start to develop such as:

- Poor energy and stamina levels

- Erectile dysfunction and poor performance in the bedroom

- Unexpected weight gain

- Mood swings and irritability

This is why it is absolutely essential for men to regain proper testosterone production. TestoChews contains ingredients that are designed to do exactly this.

For example, TestoChews contains ashwagandha, an adaptogen widely used in Ayurveda for centuries. Studies have found that ashwagandha can stimulate the production of a hormone known as luteinizing hormone.

Luteinizing hormone is a chemical that your body that sends signals to the testes to start releasing testosterone into the bloodstream. As a result, your body continually has more free testosterone available, leading to greater sex drive, stamina, energy levels, and more.

Ashwagandha has also been linked to reduced stress levels, which means the body produces less cortisol. Cortisol is the stress hormone linked to nervousness, anxiety, sleep issues, and weight gain. In men higher cortisol levels have been directly linked to reduced testosterone production, which is why controlling cortisol levels is essential to male health.

In addition, TestoChews contains vitamin D and zinc, two important vitamins needed for testosterone production. In fact, vitamin D3 is required for your body to create testosterone, which is why some men suffer from lower testosterone during the winter months when sunlight isn't as strong.

To summarize, TestoChews provides your body with key building blocks in order to produce testosterone. It also stimulates the production of testosterone through the release of luteinizing hormone, which causes the testes to release testosterone. Finally, it helps to keep cortisol levels in check, which is key in order to maintain a healthy amount of free testosterone in your body.

Ingredients in TestoChews

We've briefly mentioned the ingredients in TestoChews above, which include ashwagandha, zinc, and vitamin D.

Each of these three ingredients were carefully selected for their ability to improve your body's natural release of testosterone. Let's take a closer look into these ingredients:

KSM-66 Ashwagandha

The first and main ingredient in TestoChews is ashwagandha in the form of KSM-66. KSM-66 is a patented form of ashwagandha that contains a higher concentration of withanolides, the main active compound in ashwagandha.

Studies have found that withanolides can improve the release of luteinizing hormone, which signals to the testes to release more testosterone. This simple, yet powerful effect can directly lead to an increase in testosterone levels in just weeks. In fact, some studies have found high luteinizing hormone levels led to an increase in free testosterone in as little as 14 days.

In addition, KSM-66 ashwagandha has been shown to reduce the amount of cortisol that is produced by the adrenal glands. While some cortisol is needed to control certain bodily functions, high levels of cortisol can lead to unwanted effects. Some of the effects of high cortisol levels include: anxiety, weight gain, uncontrollable appetite, poor digestion, increased blood pressure, muscle tension, and much more.

For men, it also directly interferes with the production of testosterone, which is why it is key that cortisol levels remain at stable, healthier levels.

Vitamin D

Vitamin D is also known as the “sunshine vitamin” because our body produces it from UV rays. Vitamin D plays a key role in a number of bodily functions such as retaining calcium and phosphorus, maintaining healthy immune system function, combatting inflammation, and glucose metabolism.

Vitamin D3 also plays a direct role in the production of testosterone. Although studies have been inconclusive as to whether vitamin D3 alone can produce more testosterone, it does appear to be useful at maintaining healthy testosterone levels. In other words, you may not produce more testosterone but vitamin D3 will help you maintain a healthy level of testosterone.

Zinc

Zinc is an essential trace mineral needed for over 300 biological processes in the body. For men, zinc is needed to maintain sperm production and motility, which is key for sexual function. Zinc also plays a role in cell division, cell growth, wound healing, and the breakdown of carbohydrates.

Several studies have found that zinc can increase free testosterone levels in the body. In fact, in one study, zinc supplementation doubled testosterone levels in men with a zinc deficiency. Other studies have found an increase anywhere from 15-40% after using zinc supplements for a 6 to 10 week period of time.

Can TestoChews Really Work? What Science Says

The problem with most testosterone boosters is that they don't contain the right ingredients to actually increase your testosterone levels. So, what does science say about the ingredients in TestoChews?

Ashwagandha, and more importantly KSM-66 ashwagandha, has been extensively studied for its' ability to raise testosterone levels. In one study involving 46 male patients with low testosterone, they were given 225mg of KSM-66 each day.

After 90 days, KSM-66 increased serum testosterone levels by 17%, increased sperm count by 167%, increased semen volume by 53%, and increased sperm motility by 57%.

Another eight week, randomized, double-blind study found that KSM-66 increased testosterone levels by an average of 96.2ng/dL. Men given KSM-66 also significantly increased muscle size at the arms and chest, increased muscle strength on bench press and leg extension, and reduced body fat percentage by 3.5%.

In another study, men given a low zinc diet saw a significant reduction in testosterone levels after just 20 days compared to no drop in those with a high zinc diet. In addition, participants saw that testosterone levels rise once zinc was reintroduced to their diet.

Vitamin D studies are mixed regarding testosterone levels.

However, given that vitamin D is needed to produce testosterone, it is still an important vitamin for healthy testosterone levels and overall male vitality.

How Long Does it Take to See Results?

Although TestoChews is an effective natural test booster, it's still not a miracle supplement by any stretch of the imagination. It still needs time in order to facilitate real changes.

Plus, like any supplement, results vary from person to person. Every man is different and results can depend on your diet and exercise habits, sleep quality, and much more.

In general, TestoChews appears to start facilitating changes within the first two to three weeks of use. However, the manufacturer claims the longer you take the product, the more effective it appears to be.

This is why we recommend you use the product for four to eight weeks before you make any decisions as to whether or not TestoChews is the right natural testosterone booster for you.

Side Effects of TestoChews

TestoChews was carefully formulated to not only be an effective natural testosterone booster, but a safe one too. In fact, that's why as of this writing, there have not been any reports of any users experiencing any side effects while using TestoChews.

This is not to say that side effects cannot occur – only that they haven't occurred yet. Any side effect can potentially cause minor side effects like nausea, headache, or indigestion. However, the risk of experiencing side effects while using TestoChews is incredibly low.

Keep in mind that despite the lack of side effects, TestoChews may still not be right for everyone. For example, if you are on a prescription medication or have a serious medical condition, you should exercise caution before using TestoChews. Likewise, if you are on TRT, then it is not recommended you use this product.

Finally, TestoChews is only recommended for otherwise healthy adults over the age of 18. Therefore, you should not use this product if you are under 18.

Overall, TestoChews is a very safe, effective natural testosterone booster that should not negatively impact your health in any way. If you are still unsure whether or not it is right for you, then we recommend you speak to your doctor before trying this product.
